McGovern wins presidential nomination

By Walter R. Mears
AP Political Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Wearied by marathon preliminaries, the Democratic National Convention prepared to nominate Sen. George McGovern for president Wednesday while crippled Gov. George C. Wallace signaled the possibility of another third party race.

After the raucous, recordlong sessions it took to seat delegates and draft a platform, the convention's main event looked easy.

McGovern had the votes.

The Associated Press count of delegate commitments put the South Dakota senator well over the top at 1,613.75, with only 1,509 needed for the first-ballot nomination. Wallace had 383.

The only suspense left was over McGovern's choice of a vice presidential running mate. One name topped every list of prospects, that of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, who said he does not want to run for national office in 1972.

The list that counted was McGovern's own, said to be four or five names long, for the senator from South Dakota will have his way when the convention makes the vice presidential choice Thursday night.

McGovern was closeted at his Doral Hotel penthouse, pondering his choice and drafting an acceptance speech to appeal for unity behind his ticket in a party that has been brawling for days.

Six names were to be placed before the national convention. The first was that of former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy whose delegate commitment count is simple: zero.

The others, in order: Wallace, former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, McGovern, Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York, and Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas decided shortly before the session not to have his name entered.

The order of nominating speeches was determined by lot.

Two big names that aren't on the list: Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, who conceded the nomination to McGovern a day in advance.

Secret Service and FBI agents seized two Negro men outside McGovern's hotel and took two pistols from their automobile.

The men were charged with possession of concealed weapons and jailed in Miami.

A band of demonstrators invaded the hotel lobby in an antiwar protest. About 70 of them sat on the floor of the plush resort hotel, occasionally chanting antiwar slogans and obscenities.

About 200 paraded outside in protest against McGovern's statement that he would as president leave some forces in Southeast Asia until U.S. prisoners are released.

Across Biscayne Bay at Wallace's Miami command post, McGovern's campaign manager said the chance the Alabama governor would run on a third-party ticket again in 1972 "seems to be getting stronger and stronger every minute."

Guaranteed loan application processing delayed indefinitely

By Rita Fung
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Processing applications for Illinois guaranteed loans for SIU students will not resume July 17 as originally announced, Larry Dietz, financial aid adviser, said Wednesday.

The processing will be delayed indefinitely until new federal guidelines are established by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), Dietz said.

"We drew the July 17 date out of a hat, hoping by then the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance would be provided with guidelines to operate the new guaranteed loan program based on need analysis," he explained. "This didn't work. No word has come out of HEW in Washington or the state office in Deerfield."

"We will not accept applications until these guidelines to implement the need analysis have been provided," Dietz said.

Changes in the loan program were necessitated by the 1972 Education Amendment Bill signed into law on June 28 by President Nixon.

Under this legislation, all loan applications must be accompanied by a need analysis to be completed by a financial aid officer.

All prospective loan applicants, regardless of financial condition, must file an American College Testing (ACT) Service need analysis form, Dietz said.

"The ACT service will interpret the need of each student, and we will determine the amount of the loan based on the need analysis when the guidelines reach this office," Dietz added.

Previously, a full-time student who was an Illinois resident and a U.S. citizen, and whose family income was less than $15,000, was automatically eligible for a loan.

Under the new law, all students must file the ACT form, even if no need is claimed.

Although the new law makes guaranteed loans harder to obtain, the loan amounts have been raised, Dietz said.

"Under the old rules, a student could borrow up to $1,000 in his freshman year and up to $1,500 in each of his three remaining years at SIU," Dietz said. "He could also borrow up to $1,500 per year for graduate school, with the total amount of all loans not to exceed $7,500."

"Under the new rules, all students may apply for up to $2,500 per year for an overall total of $7,500 during their undergraduate years. A maximum of $10,000 can be borrowed should the student decide to go on to graduate school," Dietz said.

All interested applicants for Illinois guaranteed loans are advised to watch for new developments and maintain contact with the lender through which they are applying.

for construction at Carterville had to be restructured.

Carterville plans include construction of a new student center, but the upcoming move into Carbondale will force cancellation of the building, Pratt said.

Pratt said a two-phase plan probably will be developed since the new building will give VTI programs about half the necessary space. Other space may be made available in existing campus buildings or another structure may have to be erected in the future, he said.

A request in the 1973-74 capital budget lists more than $1.9 million for initiation and provision of programs for VTI on the Carbondale campus. By 1976, all VTI operations will be on campus, Pratt said.

No definite programs have been scheduled for the new structure, according to Pratt, however, he said that program priorities are under consideration.

He said a long range plan for the building will be completed by Aug. 1.

$4.1 million VTI appropriations ok'd

By Jan Tranchita
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Appropriations totalling $4.1 million have been approved by Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie for construction of a new Vocational Technical Institute building, VTI Dean Arden L. Pratt said Wednesday.

The building, to be located south of the SIU Arena, will initiate the move of vocational education from Carterville to the SIU Carbondale campus, Pratt said.

The move will allow VTI's programs to increase enrollment and "help us work more closely with other college units," he said.

New plans are under study, Pratt said, since an elaborate older version

Washington Daily News suspends operations

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Washington Daily News, an afternoon tabloid newspaper, announced it is suspending operations after today.

An official of the News, a Scripps-Howard publication, confirmed an announcement which had appeared on the employees' bulletin board of the Evening Star, a standard size newspaper which has been the News' only afternoon competition. The announcement said the Star had bought "certain assets" of the News.

The Washington Post, a morning paper, is the only other daily newspaper in Washington.

The News has had a Monday-through-Saturday circulation of around 200,000. The Star daily circulation is above 300,000 with 325,000 on Sunday. The daily Post circulation is around 500,000 with some 671,000 on Sunday.

The News observed its 50th anniversary Nov. 8, 1971.

The Star is in its 120th year. The notice on the Star bulletin board said, in part:

"In the face of continued operating losses, the Washington Daily News has just announced that it has sold certain assets to The Evening Star Newspaper Co. and will suspend operations after today."

"The Washington Daily News has been operating at a loss for more than five years, and The Evening Star has not been profitable for two years."

'Tips to Teachers' eliminates cackling Halloween witches

By Daryl Stephenson
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Remember back in elementary school when every Halloween you always tried to do something besides draw a picture of a cackling witch flying in front of a half-moon, but couldn't think of anything else, so you ended up drawing the witch anyway?

And how mad you became because the teacher would always say, "Uh, that's a very nice looking witch," but somehow couldn't give you any alternate ideas?

Well, it is precisely that problem which Elva Strouse has been attempting to solve for the past 23 years through the sale of a little, loose leaf folio called "Elva's Tips to Teachers."

Mrs. Strouse, who taught elementary school art for 28 years in the Indianapolis, Ind., area, was exhibiting the folio and discussing her ideas Tuesday and Wednesday in the Student Center ballrooms as part of the 35th annual Educational Materials Exhibit.

The folio was selling quite well too, as grade school teachers eagerly purchased either the complete volume designed for an entire school year, or a partial one containing two months' supply of ideas for fall, holiday, winter or spring.

The folio contains ideas for bulletin boards, creative art, seasonal room decorations, class projects, three-dimensional creations, gift making, charts, window pictures and posters, all illustrated at every phase with easy-to-follow directions.

What made Mrs. Strouse start such a thing?

"I used to hold small workshops to help other teachers find new artistic ideas back in Indianapolis," she said. "Then, about 23 years ago, several of my friends encouraged me to put all my ideas down in booklet form and make it available around the country."

That was the first of 21 annual volumes Mrs. Strouse was to produce, each one completely unique.

"At first the folio got publicized by word of mouth, with one teacher who had used it telling a friend and so on," said Mrs. Strouse. "But later on, I began advertising in magazines and at state teacher's conventions."

Soon, preparation of the folio and the filling of orders began to take up so much of Mrs. Strouse's time, that she decided to retire from teaching three years ago and devote all her time to the folio.

"I never throw anything away," said Mrs. Strouse about the source of her ideas. She believes that everything, from bottlecaps to clothes hangers, can be reshaped into art. "I usually just go down into the basement of my home, where I keep all my scrap material, and I can find an unlimited amount of materials for creating art."

Originally the projects contained in the folio were designed for the second and third grades, said Mrs. Strouse, but now she is getting requests from teachers of as high as seventh and eighth grade classes. Most teachers who have used "Elva's Tips" seem quite satisfied, said Mrs. Strouse. "Most of them are not art instructors themselves, or else they work in school systems which have not hired full-time art instructors, and thus they are highly receptive to any kind of help they can find."

Now, if only my teacher had known about "Elva's Tips," I wouldn't have spent six straight Halloween seasons splashing watercolors all over a witch's nose.

McGovern wins nomination

In the early morning hours, the convention had shouted down the effort of the Wallace minority to turn the party platform in its conservative direction.

Charles S. Snider said Wallace will decide soon after the convention whether to undertake another third-party campaign. The Alabama governor, addressing the convention from his wheelchair, appealed in Tuesday night for a more conservative party stance and a repudiation of the busing of school children for purposes of racial balance.

After a record-long session, the convention approved a platform tailored to the liberal posture of McGovern, advocating prompt and total withdrawal of U.S. forces from Indochina.

In addition to withdrawal from Indochina, the Democrats' platform calls for the closing of tax loopholes, replacement of the welfare system with income grants, and acceptance of busing as a tool when it contributes to quality education.

It was approved by the voice vote of those delegates still on hand after the nearly 12-hour session.

Two men with big but different stakes in the Democratic decision looked on from afar.

President Nixon tuned in his television in San Clemente, Calif., from time to time.

And Kennedy did the same in Hyannis Port. A spokesman said he stayed away "not to shun the convention but to avoid the speculation that would arise if he were there."

McGovern was sure to be on the telephone to Kennedy, in Hyannis Port, Mass., soon after the nominating roll call. Kennedy has remained away from the convention but indicated he might come down before the sessions end to help bolster party unity.

Other names on his list of vice-presidential prospects were said to include Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers, Sens. Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota, Thomas F. Eagleton of Missouri and Abraham A. Ribicoff of Connecticut, and Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida.

Taming the Nile

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptians are learning it will take more than the Aswan High Dam to tame the Nile.

Because of the dam, the muscle of the mighty river flexes with new vigor, threatening to undermine 550 bridges built within the last 19 years as well as three diversion dams, old but still needed.

The dam has strained out the silt, washed down from Ethiopia and central Africa. Without this burden—110 million tons a year—the river surges through the valley of the Nile with new force, chiseling out river banks more than ever.

Ten new but smaller dams, costing about $22 million each, are planned downstream to slow the water on its way toward the Mediterranean. Otherwise, engineers say, damage from erosion will be severe in 10 to 15 years.

A critical look at health care

A new health plan to provide comprehensive care to the faculty and students of SIU has been proposed to the Faculty Council for approval.

This plan would coordinate local hospitals and clinics plus the SIU health service together to form a cooperating health agency.

Services that the new health plan would try to offer and provide are:

—A prepaid hospital and physician service made available to all interested parties.

—Reduced doctor shortages provided for by recruiting more physicians particularly in the area of family practice.

—More efficient use of existing personnel and resources.

The yearly fee for these services would be $75 per student.

A yearly fee of $75 does not seem like much to pay, but for something that a student doesn't need, it is just wasted money.

Gary Dickerson, chairman of the Student Health Consumer Council, has said, "The main bone of contention for the student has been that the plan is mandatory." Naturally, this would be the "main bone of contention." It is agreed that the proposed health package is good, but the idea of making it mandatory for every SIU student to spend $75 a year is silly. Why should anyone, for that matter, be forced to buy something that he doesn't need or want? The time to start thinking about insurance and how much to pay for it is when we really need and want it. We must refuse to have it forced upon us. We come to school to learn, not to get a good deal on health insurance.

The Health Service now offers a primary health plan, which means that most everything is free except treatment. Under the new Health plan, everything is offered for $75 a year, but this is forced upon the individual.

I cannot understand the offering of everything for one price to a person who does not even permanently live in the Southern Illinois area. If a student needs to be treated for minor injuries, he will probably stay and receive treatment locally. He really only needs a primary health plan, which we already have.

The new proposed health plan offers surgery as a benefit. Unless the surgery is an emergency, what student, who is not from around the Carbondale area, would undergo surgery in a strange town? I'm sure the student would want the familiar surrounding of home, parents and his own physician. An extended stay in the hospital would be the same case.

So why should a student pay for an extensive treatment plan, when his or her parents probably already have them insured under a family plan? There is such little use for it.

Local doctors, as stated in the Daily Egyptian on Dec. 4, 1971, expressed concern about the new plan, saying that there is no guarantee that the plan would be better than the one now in use in operational efficiency. They also expressed concern about whether or not additional staff physicians would move into this area, and that possibly a few might move away.

There should be a few guarantees from the insurance company, the Shawnee Regional Health Maintenance System and whoever else is involved in this venture, that this plan would bring better health care to this area before being initiated. There are too many "ifs" in this venture, but those involved in initiating this plan wouldn't suffer any because they will be guaranteed $75 from each and every student.

I'm not exactly sure why SIU has to guarantee, by making the $75 payment mandatory for students, the Shawnee Regional Health Maintenance System (HMS) payment in order to initiate this health plan. It should be tried on a trial basis, where it has to prove itself and the only subscribers were those that wanted the plan in the first place. It should be optional.

Let HMS take all the risks of whether or not the plan will succeed. They have the opportunity to make a go of it in the Carbondale area. HMS doesn't offer any guarantees so why should SIU guarantee payment for a possible farce.

Letters to the Editor IPIRG funding rejected

To the Daily Egyptian:

I read in the Daily Egyptian (July 11) that the Illinois Public Interest Research Group (IPIRG) is in the process of requesting an addition of one dollar to the tuition fee to support IPIRG activities.

I question the wisdom of granting money to a group with such diffuse aims as "consumer education." The members of IPIRG certainly may have good ideas on the matter, but how can anyone commit funds on behalf of a third party for services that have never been seen or defined. Have the members of IPIRG committed themselves to contractual obligations which would assure the students that their money was being well spent?

I do not understand why IPIRG is going to the collecting mechanism of the University itself instead of directly to the students. If the students showed as much enthusiasm for the plan as the Daily Egyptian reported, then IPIRG should have no trouble collecting voluntary contributions from its supporters—possibly even more than the one dollar per head that they have requested.

I feel that a group which uses the collecting facilities of the University has an unfair advantage over other worthy organizations. IPIRG's goals are certainly admirable (research, etc.), but would not for example the Catholic Church have just as good a claim for such voluntary collections in the field of "consumer education?"

Could it be that some members of IPIRG do not trust the good sense of students? Do they hope to take advantage of the collecting process because they suspect that at another moment or place the students would prefer to put that dollar in more worthwhile projects? Could it be that IPIRG feels that there is nothing more worthwhile than IPIRG? I think not. IPIRG deserves the benefit of the doubt: it deserves an atmosphere free of any mistrust or evidence that it is taking students for granted.

Does not IPIRG present a good opportunity for the Board of Trustees to strike a blow at apathy and student irresponsibility? How easy it is for students to evade responsibility and allow well-meaning people to make decisions for them. Here is an opportunity for someone to put the responsibility squarely on the students' shoulders, teaching them to be responsible by allowing them to decide, independent of artificial pressures, whether this or that organization deserves his support.

One might say that one dollar represents very little money to a student; but the importance of many small decisions every day can add up to enormous differences in the spirit of cooperation in the community.

As a student, I respectfully request that the Board turn IPIRG down.

Ode to a sandwich napper

To the Daily Egyptian:
An Open Letter to a Sandwich Napper:

What I had planned for my lunch Tuesday became the meal for someone else. Someone had taken my lunch out of my car and evidently made a meal for himself. The individual left only the cellophane bag that the two sandwiches were in. Upon first examination of this incident, I could not grasp the rationale behind the theft. The reason for stealing them couldn't be because they were the best in the world (a peanut butter and jelly sandwich, and a bologna, lettuce and mayonnaise on hamburger buns), or it didn't bother me that he stole my end-of-the-week leftovers, when it was only Tuesday. But what had bothered me was, what shape were you in that you had to take them? I just borrowed 50 cents from one of my friends and I went to McDonald's. What will you do tomorrow? I hope your situation improves in the future. Oh, by the way, if you do come upon my car again, please, leave the peanut butter and jelly. The bologna and lettuce acquire a somewhat different taste in a hot car. Thank you.

Letter to the Editor Retain textbook rental system

To the Daily Egyptian:

Bernard F. Whalen made a mistake when he recommended editorially that the Textbook Rental Service be discontinued. The eight basic reasons Mr. Whalen gives for discontinuance are false and misleading, prime examples of the specious reasoning which dictates so much of the decision making at SIU.

The reason that no other major university (not no major university) in the nation has a textbook rental service is that they sell textbooks, either exclusively or in competition with private bookstores, to their students, ergo, why should they rent them when they can make more money selling them? Another reason for this, I suspect, is that the other universities have, at least, a tacit agreement with the private bookstores not to supply books at nominal cost to the students. We all know, of course, that there is no possibility of illegal kickback involved in this sort of arrangement, as universities are always open and aboveboard and never do anything illegal or unethical. Yes, Mr. Whalen's argument that SIU should discontinue rental has the holding capacity of a bottomless bucket.

Secondly, I would like to know, on whose authority Mr. Whalen can make the flat statement that "the rental system has a tendency to render books of low quality." I, for one, do not believe this and I challenge Mr. Whalen to conclusively prove this. I suggest Mr. Whalen check with the rental service and find out what books are indeed "antiquated" or if instructors do not request that books be replaced as they are superceded.

Mr. Whalen's third argument shows faulty logic at its best. I will agree with the premise that the average textbook costs around $8. However, a refund value of $4 is a depreciation of 50 per cent for a book, in the case of SIU, that is barely three months old and often barely distinguishable from new. Doesn't this depreciation strike you as a bit steep?

Miami Beach, August 10—The 1972 Democratic Convention entered its second month here today. The 17 surviving delegates celebrated the occasion on the convention floor with a fist fight.

At his daily press briefing, Democratic National Chairman Larry O'Brien issued his daily statement that "A united and well-financed Democratic Party will go forward to victory in November."

O'Brien issued the statement from his tent on the beach in front of the Xanadu Motor Court, where he had moved three weeks ago after being evicted from his hotel suite for non-payment of rent.

O'Brien also pledged the Great Credentials Fight would be resolved "very soon"—or, as he put it, "as very soon as I can raise $17.80 to get them printed."

The three reporters present cheered feebly. For he referred, of course, to the great fight over press credentials. This developed when the Democrats decided to issue press credentials daily, rather than for the entire convention.

As it required 20 hours of standing in line to get a credential the credential was a day old by the time the reporter arrived at the convention hall. And the secret service was not about to allow anyone to enter with a day-old credential.

Newsman who have somehow managed to sneak in report, however, that the convention hall is a very nice place.

The convention deadlocked, old-timers remember, when Sen. McGovern was four votes shy of the nomination on the first ballot. Each of the other candidates then united, as expected, behind himself.

Initially, the erosion among the McGovern delegation was the heaviest—primarily because the McGovern delegates were the poorest.

With the price of a bagle and lox (the indigenous native food) running $4.75 (with pickle $5.50), 52.3 per cent of the delegation had been eroded in the first week by starvation.

Senator Humphrey then moved into the top spot and might have sewn up the nomination if most of his delegates hadn't been carried away. Being older than the McGovern people, most of them were carried away by heat stroke.

The betting then centered on poor-but-honest Senator Muskie. Unfortunately, he was handed his hotel bill in the middle of a televised press conference and broke into tears.

A day later, Governor Wallace bolted and formed his own party. He bolted the door of his room and said over a mint julep that while it would be very nice to have the Democratic nomination, he'd rather be president.

The experts are now predicting that former multi-millionaire Astor J. Vandergetty will win on the 5432nd ballot by a unanimous vote of one to nothing.

Vandergetty was a multi-millionaire when he arrived here a month ago. He now claims he has enough money left to last three more days in Miami Beach. The experts agree that ought to do it.

In answer to Mr. Whalen's fourth point, I suggest he visit one of the three bookstores already located in Carbondale, including the University Center Bookstore, "where a wide range of reading materials can be purchased at reasonable prices."

Merely because millions of college students must buy textbooks is no reason for SIU students to do so. Millions of people are racists, too. Nor can I see how the purchase of texts over the rental of texts guarantees the books will be of higher quality. Once again, prove it. As for the hogwash of building a library, a student can do so now if he is willing to pay the textbook service and has the inclination and storage space to do so.

Mr. Whalen proposes that the elimination of the Textbook Rental Service would rid Morris Library of an "unneeded hassle." I say that Morris Library provides little enough service now and I can't see how a further reduction will aid the students. I also feel that Morris Library might delve into the area of organization before they try dubiously needed expansion.

Mr. Whalen's final point is the oddest piece of logic I have ever seen. He seems to feel that concern for the student's wallet and academic progress are irreconcilably and diametrically opposed. Personally, my wallet could not support $150 worth of textbooks a year, thereby causing me to either not buy the books or drop out of school and I'm sure the vast majority of SIU students would agree with me. Is that academic progress? Mr. Whalen is right on when he says students will not support a proposal which will cost them more money, especially one which will cost them more money unnecessarily. Mr. Whalen gives the most conclusive argument for the retention of the Textbook Rental Service as sort of a backhanded compliment to the present service when he states that "the only reason given for retaining the Textbook Service is its low cost and convenience to students." I was always under the impression that a university was run for benefit of the students, however Mr. Whalen contradicts this. He too shows concern for wallets—the wallets of the authors of textbooks, the wallets of the publishers of textbooks, and the wallets of the bookstores. What is the purpose of this university? For whom does it exist? Additional costs of textbook purchase would only put education further out of the reach of the "average" student.

I get the feeling that a studentless administrative bureaucracy comprising SIU-Carbondale comes a step closer every day.

Airplane, Chicago possible performers for fall concerts

By Ed Donnelly
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Jefferson Airplane, Cat Stevens, Chicago, Elton John and The James Gang are possible performers for fall quarter concerts. The groups scored high in four recent student talent surveys participated in by over 2,000 SIU students and are presently under negotiation by Dean Justice, Arena Manager.

Cat Stevens is tentatively planned.

Students from Marketing 390 and Speech 202 classes conducted surveys that interviewed 1,229 SIU students spring quarter. The other surveys consisted of ballots in the Daily Egyptian and were sponsored by the SIU Arena Manager's Office and Student Government Activities Office.

"We tabulated the results of the four surveys and have used them as a valuable tool in consideration," Justice said.

The surveys also indicated $5.50 was the top price the average student would be willing to pay for an Arena concert.

"Our biggest problem is meeting the schedules and demands of the performers," Justice said. "For example, we cannot even touch Rod Stewart, Isaac Hayes, the Rolling Stones or Three Dog-Night either because they want too much money or that they consider our 8,800 seating not enough," he said.

Justice said other groups that scored high are not available for concerts. For example, he said, Santana has broken up, Jethro Tull is booked solid, the Moody Blues are not touring the U.S. and James Taylor has moved to Europe.

"Most students don't realize the difficulty involved in contracting these performers for our Arena," Justice said.

Justice cited transportation to Carbondale and the Arena facility as major obstacles in getting "big groups."

"Most university concerts are funded from student fees and can pay the $25,000 guarantee required by big groups.

When asked how SIU concerts compare to those at the University of Illinois in Champaign, Justice said, "It is unfair to consider our concerts inferior because they (Illinois) have concerts funded by student fees with a building and surrounding area that can draw twice as much as in Carbondale."

Enemy strikes force South Viet retreat

SAIGON (AP)—Enemy forces struck Wednesday at the vital southwest flank of South Vietnamese troops battling around the provincial capital of Quang Tri, forcing a retreat.

North Vietnamese forces remained entrenched in the city despite heavy bombing and shelling as the 20,000-man South Vietnamese drive into Quang Tri Province entered its third week.

Associated Press correspondent Dennis Neeld reported from the northern front that several hundred North Vietnamese troops backed by tanks attacked government paratroopers on the southwestern flank and drove them off their hilltop positions.

The southwestern flank of the operation is considered vital because allied officers have been concerned since the beginning of the drive that the North Vietnamese might attempt to circle around behind the task force and attack Hue, 32 miles to the southeast.

Other battles raged on the northern, eastern and southern sides of Quang Tri City. Military officials at Hue reported that Checkmate, a hilltop outpost 12 miles southwest of the old imperial capital, had been recaptured by government forces.

The strategic outpost on a 1,000-foot promontory overlooking the main western approach to Hue has changed hands four times in the past two weeks.

In a revised report on a marine combat assault north of Quang Tri on Tuesday, the U.S. command said Wednesday that two American helicopter crewmen were missing after their aircraft was shot down in the airlift of South Vietnamese marines. The crewmen earlier had been reported wounded.

Festival winners may appear here

Blue ribbon winners at the American Film Festival in New York may be shown at SIU this fall as part of two festivals planned by the Learning Resources Film Rental Service (LRFRS).

The Sept. 4-8 festival will be open to the public with special invitations being sent to area instructors, according to Jerry C. Hostetter, head of film rentals.

Another festival, consisting of a continuous three-day showing of films in SIU's film library, is planned for late fall. SIU and area instructors will be given an opportunity to preview the latest films available.

The festivals are only one of several services offered by the Film Rental Service.

Hostetter said the goal of LRFRS is to help develop multimedia programs at SIU and in area schools. "We are also a consulting service to aid area schools in any area of audio-visual services," he added.

The film service helps promote interaction between SIU and surrounding communities. Carbondale Community High School, John A. Logan Junior College and community groups are frequent users of LRFRS.

News programs, as 60 Minutes and First Tuesday are released by LRFRS one year after the television premiere. Many Walt Disney films are also available for rental.

The film library originated in 1948 as a cooperative project of several campus departments. Since then it has started a loan program and now stocks over 6,000 films. Films purchased by LRFRS can range from $400, for a 35-40 minute reel, to $1000 for a color, 60-minute film.

Hostetter said a LRFRS catalog of film titles is published every two years with supplements issued every six months. The catalogs are sent to area schools and rental agencies. A special catalog edition is mailed to Illinois crime and correction institutions.

The film service has had difficulty informing surrounding communities of its services. "Even at SIU," Hostetter said, "faculty members do not know they can obtain films free of charge from us."

Kristofferson uplifts crowd at 'perfect' festival evening

By Pat Nussman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

I find it difficult to be critical of a performance at the Mississippi River Festival: the setting is perfect for a concert, particularly one of the relaxed style of Kris Kristofferson.

Instead of the hard SIU Arena seats the SIU-C student is accustomed to viewing from, the audience at the festival site at the SIU-E campus can relax on the grass, gaze at the stars and breathe the scent of the non-herb on the evening breeze.

All this, and Kris Kristofferson, too.

The composer of "Me and Bobby McGee" was not a disappointing performer, as he and his talented accompanists made music in the distinctively sensitive Kristofferson style.

It is almost an uplifting experience to sit under the stars on a cool July night and hear Kristofferson sing his poetic "Loving Her Was Easier."

There were lively moments. When Kristofferson and his group sang the satirical "Okie from Muskogee" a sizable portion of the approximately 10,000 people covering the hill above the tent clapped and sang along.

But the concert was not perfect. The most notably not-perfect part was when singer Rita Coolidge came on after intermission.

Kristofferson obviously thought highly of Ms. Coolidge and there was no doubt about her talent after the first song...and the second...and the...

The point is that every song she sang sounded like the one before that and after five or six of these whole thing became rather tiresome.

Indian art show

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — An exhibition presenting the range of the major forms of American Indian art will be presented Oct. 8 through Dec. 10, 1972, by the Minneapolis Institute of Arts and Walker Art Center.

The showing will be in conjunction with the Indian Art Assn., recently formed specifically to work on this project by representatives of nine local Indian organizations.

Principal support has come from the Dayton Hudson Foundation and the National Endowment for the Arts.

The exhibition will present such object groups as masks, carved figures, painted hides, pottery, basketry, weaving, costumes and musical instruments.

In short, it became very easy to go to sleep under the starry MRF skies. Some turned their undivided attention to members of the opposite sex or engaged in quiet conversation. The crowd thinned out considerably.

Eventually, however, Kristofferson came back on stage, much to the relief of the audience, and joined

Ms. Coolidge in "Help Me Make It Through the Night" and "Me and Bobby McGee." The remaining people woke up for the encore.

And, despite the slightly soporific influence of Ms. Coolidge, the feeling from the music of the thin, ill-clad Kristofferson remained even as I folded my blanket and left the grass-covered slope.

No new federal funds available this year

By Sue Roll
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Under an extensive higher education bill passed in June by the U.S. House of Representatives, Illinois could receive approximately $1 billion in federal monies.

But although approved, no monies for the bill have been provided. Thus, Illinois students will not be much better off than before, said Frank Adams, program director of the Student Work and Financial Assistance program.

Adams said he does not expect new federal funds to be available for students attending SIU next year. Programs funding is expected to be appropriated next year to aid students in 1972-73, he said.

Adams said his office will rely on old programs to help 1972-73 SIU students.

The new education aid bill does provide for some changes in old aid programs, but most will not drastically alter the programs, Adams said.

The University has received a commitment for three federal programs for next year, William R. Parks, accountant with student work and financial assistance, said.

"But until the money is made available, it's not official." The approximate amounts for these programs in 1972-73 are $157,106 for Educational Opportunity Grants, $608,866 for the College Work Study Program and $658,929 for National Student Defense Loans.

A report compiled by Parks Monday showed that $456,935.50 was available for the work study program in 1970-71 with $697,115.06 for 1971-72. Parks estimated the figures for national defense loans to be $744,000 for 1970-71 and $892,000 in 1971-72. He said educational opportunity grant monies were approximately $148,490 in 1970-71 and $136,720 in 1971-72.

Defense loan and work study program funds for 1972-73 have been reduced from last year's amount. Adams said he hopes these amounts will be increased with supplemental monies once the new federal aid bill is funded.

Under the new aid bill, a program for Basic Educational Opportunity Grants would have the most effect, Adams said.

All students with financial need would be eligible for the grant. The grants cannot exceed half of the actual cost to attend the University, which at SIU is $2,400 per year, Adams said. They also cannot be more than $1,400 per student minus the student's expected family contribution.

In addition, the grants cannot exceed the difference between the family contribution and the $2,400 cost of attending SIU.

The new bill also provides extension of new and existing student aid programs to part-time students. The students must sign affidavits promising to use student aid funds only for college expenses.

Adams said University officials have not been consulted about offering the aid programs for part-time students. "It may not be in the best interest of the University to have many half-time students when the institution gets money from the state by the credit hours it generates," Adams explained.

Another new program provides matching federal funds for state student grant funds. Adams said Illinois has one of the nation's most extensive grant programs and should receive a large share of monies allotted for this program.

The program provides for $50 million each year from fiscal years 73-75 for all fifty states. Since Illinois has one of the best student grant programs it should receive more than $1 million, Adams said.

The new bill also provides for extension of the Insured Student Loan Program which includes the Illinois Guaranteed Loan. The total amount a student may borrow is increased from $1,500 per year to $2,500. The bill also sets the limit for the total amount borrowed at $7,500 for undergraduates and $10,000 for graduate students.

One of the main changes in the program is tightening up of the need requirement for the loans, Adams said. Previously the loans were made without extreme need being necessary. These loans are not being processed until more specific guidelines making the loans are forwarded from the federal government, Adams said.

SIU students usually borrow about $4 million a year through the Illinois Guaranteed Loan, Adams said. He said he expects this amount to decrease with the new policy toward the loans and estimated that about $3,250,000 would be borrowed next year by SIU students.

Aside from the Illinois Guaranteed Loan, Adams said the new education bill will greatly increase total aid available to students. "In a year or two the outlook for needy students will be terrific," he said.

Other measures included in the higher education aid bill are:

—Formation of a Student Loan Marketing Association, a government sponsored private corporation, to serve as a "secondary market and warehousing facility for insured student loans."

—Modify the College Work Study Program to include students with the greatest financial need, authorize work-study for community service learning programs and give preference for Vietnam veterans for the programs.

—Increase direct loan program.

—Extend program of innovative methods for cooperative education.

Campus governance subject of report

By Bernard F. Whalen
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The University Senate governance committee Wednesday planned an historical report and considered a meeting with President David Derge to bring about cooperation between the Senate and President's office.

Anthony Catanese, Senate vice president, said he will compile a report on the relationship of the Campus Governance System to the president's office. Catanese said he will try to trace instances in which the President has failed to act on legislative proposals.

The committee also discussed the possibility of meeting with Derge and seeking responses to his view of the campus governance system.

Catanese said Derge has failed to act on two Senate proposals and several Faculty Council proposals. The two Senate proposals concerned reconstitution of the teaching—learning task forces and parking fees.

The governance committee met for the first time Wednesday with Catanese acting as chairman. The committee, under the University Senate document, has been given the responsibility of monitoring the campus governance system.

Frank Sehnert, of the administrative and professional staff council, said the committee should deliberate on establishing Senate guidelines of power and influence. He said the Senate should know its areas of authority and have specific objectives regarding its areas of action.

The committee planned to meet next week, sometime after Catanese's report is circulated. Members of the committee include: Ralph Bedwell, Robert G. Laver, Anthony Marconi, Joe Moore, Frank Sehnert, Bill Wotowich, Judy Williford and Derge.

Officer identifies guns used in Panther raid

CHICAGO (AP)—A police officer assigned to the office of State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan identified Wednesday weapons he said he issued to three of Hanrahan's codefendants the day before a raid on an apartment in which two Black Panthers were killed.

Hanrahan and 13 codefendants were on trial before Judge Philip J. Romiti in Circuit Court on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice by allegedly altering or concealing evidence after the raid.

Lt. John C. Delaney was one of four policemen who testified as the prosecution, headed by Barnabas Sears, opened its case.

Delaney, a 34-year police veteran, said he had a conversation with Richard Jalovec, Hanrahan's assistant who is among those on trial, about the issuance of weapons Dec. 3, 1969.

Delaney also said Daniel Groth, another of the codefendants, was present during the conversation but Delaney said he could not recall whether Groth said anything.

"We got into a conversation as to the purpose of the weapons," Delaney, who was in charge of the state's arsenal, testified. "He (Jalovec) informed me some of the men assigned to him were going on the raid."

Delaney said he issued a sub-machine gun with 110 rounds of ammunition to Joseph Gorman, a .12 gauge shotgun to Raymond Broderick and two shotguns to William Corbett. Delaney said he issued a total of 40 rounds of ammunition for the shotguns. He added that Corbett told him one of the shotguns was to be used for another member of the raiding team who was off duty that day.

Delaney said Gorman returned 58 rounds of ammunition hours after the pre-dawn raid Dec. 4.

Delaney's testimony came as the prosecution sought to put in evidence the weapons allegedly used by the racially mixed detail of policemen who conducted the raid after receiving a tip that weapons were stored in the apartment.

FTC accuses Spiegel of lending act violation

CHICAGO (AP)—Spiegel Inc., a Chicago mail order firm, and its offshoot, Fairfax Family Fund Inc., of Louisville, Ky., were accused today by the Federal Trade Commission of using allegedly deceptive promotional materials.

The FTC ordered a ban on such circulars—which it said violate the Truth in Lending Act—under a provisional consent order accepted by the FTC.

The FTC said a complaint contends that Fairfax advertising circulars misrepresent these claims:

That a loan application form is a negotiable check; that a consumer's credit standing is approved and the loan authorized when it is, in fact, contingent upon a credit investigation to be made in the future; that the consumer can select a credit life insurer although when the loan application allows no place for him to do so, that the cost of making a debt consolidation loan with Fairfax is lower than it actually is.

"The agreement is for settlement purposes only and does not constitute an admission by the respondents that they have violated the law," the FTC said.

Black groups to sponsor business and pleasure day

A "Black Business and Pleasure Day" will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday in Evergreen Park behind Evergreen Terrace.

Transportation will be provided. Buses will leave from University City and University Park at 12:30 p.m. and 1:30 p.m. Saturday afternoon.

Activities for the day will include fishing, baseball and dancing to the Jon Taylor Band, plus academic and job advisement. Cooking facilities will be available, and later in the evening there will be a free dance at the Student Center for all black faculty, staff and students.

The event is sponsored by Black American Studies, the Black Affairs Council and the Black Veterans Association.

According to Cheryl Randolph of the Black Affairs Council, the event will hopefully increase awareness regarding services and funds available to black students. These include information concerning loans, job opportunities and academic needs such as assistantships for graduate work.

Thieves loose in the jail

BALTIMORE (AP)—The city jail is losing money "because we have all these thieves working for us," says Warden Hiram L. Schoonfield.

"Fifty or sixty inmates who work for us steal faster than you can imagine," Schoonfield told the City Council, saying the use of inmate labor is false economy.

"The other day I had a shakedown in one section and I found more than 40 pounds of chicken."

ONE OF THE MORE PERSISTENT REQUESTS FOR A GRADE CHANGE I'VE EVER HAD!

Campus briefs

Dr. Edwin F. Pearson, assistant professor of physics, has received a summer appointment as visiting scientist in the chemistry department at the University of Illinois.

A widening field for home economists in family services is foreseen as a result of the federal social welfare bill now pending in Congress, according to Karen Craig, acting chairman of the family economics and management department at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

SIU, which in 1967 established a specialized program for family services consultants in the School of Home Economics, was a pioneer in this field. Today, Mrs. Craig said, there are approximately 50 colleges and universities offering such training.

Mrs. Craig attended a recent national workshop conducted by the American Home Economics Association to consider criteria for curricula in community, health and welfare home economics programs.

There are currently about 15 students who are specializing in this program.

Soprano Victoria Hawley and pianist Edwin Romain will be featured in a School of Music Senior recital at 8 p.m. July 28 in the Home Economics auditorium. Other music programs coming up will be a concert by the Summer University Choir at 8 p.m. Aug. 1 in the Lutheran Student Chapter and a senior recital by Charles Gomez, saxophonist, at 8 p.m. Aug. 4 in the Old Baptist Foundation.

Peace Corps, Vista to recruit graduates

SIU students facing midyear graduation and a tight job market should apply for the more than 1,000 Peace Corps and Vista jobs available this fall, according to Tom Fife, area recruiting manager.

Fife announced that recruiters will be at SIU for three days, July 25 through 27, and will interview applicants daily in the International Center, Wing C, in Woody Hall.

The Peace Corps needs 100 persons with agriculture degrees or backgrounds, 28 architects, 35 persons with health specialties including nursing, 69 business majors, 17 civil engineers and 105 teachers. Similar needs are projected for Vista.

Fife emphasized that this number represents a need for fall and winter training and placement. An equal need will exist for winter and spring training.

ACTION (the agency handling Peace Corps and Vista) has a never-ending need for volunteers, which is why we have moved into a heavier summer recruiting program than ever before," Fife emphasized.

Degrees are important but not essential to many of the areas. Fife said. Persons with experience in some areas, particularly agriculture, skilled trades and business, are being sought.

Peace Corps and Vista volunteers receive a living allowance and have a lump sum saved for a termination allowance after the assigned project ends.

All interested persons may visit recruiters from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., July 25-27 in the International Center.

IBHE approves relocation of office space to Faner

By Sue Roll
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) has given final approval to a change in space assignment for the new Humanities Building. The change provides for redesignation of 44 classrooms as offices, lapse of the lease of at least one rented, off-campus dormitory and removal of 20 other temporary buildings on campus.

The board also approved a master of fine arts degree in theater which replaces the master of arts degree which is now offered. The new degree will stress the creative accomplishments of the student rather than the usual research thesis.

The IBHE also approved a five year program in engineering biophysics which will combine engineering, pure science and medicine. The program will offer a four-year degree in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and a master's degree the fifth year.

Forty-four of the 83 classrooms of the Humanities Building, or Faner Hall, named after a former chairman of the Department of English, are to be converted into offices, under the new IBHE-approved plan.

All 83 classrooms are not needed since the initial design of the building followed a projected campus enrollment of 35,000 students. The IBHE set an enrollment maximum of 23,580 students in 1971.

The University plans to drop the lease of College Square Dormitory, which now houses the community development and the crime and corrections programs, Dave Grobe, space administrator, said.

These two programs are to be relocated in the new building, but the relocation of programs such as the Center for Vietnamese Studies have not been settled, he said.

The offices housed in the 20 other temporary buildings to be removed are to be relocated at Faner Hall. They include various barracks and older houses where units to be moved to the new building are located, such as the Geography Department, Linguistics, Anthropology Department and Center for English as a Foreign Language, Grobe said.

John Holt, space administrator, explained that which barracks and houses are to be affected cannot yet be determined, since final space allocations for the Faner Hall have not been completed.

John Baker, assistant to the president for planning, development and review and who was recently named assistant provost, said other leased dormitory offices may be moved to Faner Hall, but this had not been worked out yet.

Off-campus dormitories leased by the University for office use are Forest Hall, Park Place North and South, College Square Dormitory and College View Dormitory. The Parrish Building had also been leased for research use by R. Buckminster Fuller. Holt said he understood the lease on the Parrish building will be dropped. Offices also are located at Washington Square, but the University has this on a purchase agreement and this will not be affected by the moves to Faner Hall, Baker said.

New Democratic party born at convention

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—A national convention far more orderly than many had expected is giving birth here this week to a new Democratic party.

Its parents are the men and women who have marched in protest against the Vietnam war and have fought for reform of the political process, rather than the barons of labor and big-city bosses who dominated the party for 40 years.

The transition became evident last Monday night when a coalition led by 1968 standard-bearers Hubert H. Humphrey and Edmund S. Muskie lost the California credentials fight and the convention then voted to deny a seat to Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, once the most powerful of party potentates.

The change was underscored dramatically Tuesday night when the party's foreign policy plank, calling for total U.S. withdrawal from Indochina, was presented to applause by former Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon, foe of the Johnson policy which was upheld at the party's disruptive convention in Chicago four years ago.

The transformation became complete Wednesday night when the convention, in one monumental ballot, gave the presidential nomination and party leadership to Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, a man scorned by most of the mighty during his lonely, seemingly hopeless campaign.

Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida, a possible McGovern running mate, took note in his keynote speech Tuesday night of "a new coalition in our country, a coalition of protest."

It is that new coalition that is in charge here this week: the young, the poor, the black, the women, the educated professionals from the suburbs. Keeping it tuned like a fine violin, the smooth-running McGovern organization has humbled and taken over from the party's top politicians in state after state.

The forces of protest that thronged around Chicago's convention hall and clashed in bloody confrontation with Daley's police have dissolved into an almost insignificant few, their numbers dwarfed by the massive crowd of well-trained security forces. Many who protested outside in 1968 are inside as delegates in 1972.

For 40 years, since Franklin D. Roosevelt plus the impact of economic depression forged a new majority coalition, Democrats have counted on a combination of labor, minority groups and city machines to maintain national control.

But since the last of Roosevelt's days, this control has waned. Most of the big industrial states have Republican governors; Democrats have lost three of the last five presidential elections.

When first Muskie, then Humphrey sought to rely on the old coalition in the Democratic primaries this spring, each found it inadequate to overcome the forces of protest led by McGovern on the left, and Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace on the right.

In part, as McGovern has insisted, it is because there is no left, no right, in the old terms. There are the rich, the powerful, the leaders of both parties—and there are those who crave that power and have triumphed here this week.

More surprising, perhaps, than the triumph ordained by McGovern's growing strength in primaries this spring has been the mood with which the change in party leadership has taken place.

In the days before the convention, the bitterness between the McGovern and Humphrey camps had escalated. The two leaders, long-time personal friends, spoke harshly of one another. The McGovern forces felt the Credentials Committee decision to strip their 151 California delegates was a steal, and the resentment went beyond the bitter words of McGovern himself.

The Humphrey forces, grasping at every straw in their uphill battle to halt McGovern, scolded the McGovern forces for threatening a bolt and said they were unwilling to accept the reforms the South Dakotan had been pushing.

But, with that California decision reversed, the mood changed rapidly. Humphrey, then Muskie, dropped from presidential contention, and their followers for the most part mellowed rapidly in accepting the inevitable. Even the Wallace forces, after cheering their crippled leader, failed to press for roll calls on their platform proposals.

Nevertheless, bitterness remains. Much, while not directed at McGovern himself, is aimed at his supporters and the way, in state after state, they seized control of convention delegations and party organizations. Labor leaders, in particular, are bitter and unreconciled to McGovern's triumph.

McGovern has sought to be conciliatory. Even after he failed to compromise the Chicago credentials dispute, he still held out an olive branch to Daley, eager to patch things up so he can carry Illinois in November.

The defected groups, labor especially, will have the rest of the summer to decide whether they want the Democrats, led by McGovern, to regain national power or prefer four more years of President Nixon.

Student plays lawyer's role, loses own case

By Monroe Walker
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Two-and-a-half hours may not seem like such a long time, but as far as civil cases of trespassing are concerned, it may prove to be a "first" in the history of the Murphysboro Circuit Court.

After listening to his lengthy testimony Wednesday afternoon, Circuit Court Judge Richard Richman ruled SIU student James W. Russell guilty of trespassing on posted property.

Robert Schulhof, Carbondale assistant city attorney, said that the case was an unusually long one for cases of this type but "each person is entitled to his day in court no matter how big or how small the case."

It all started on June 7 when James Rossiter, a Carbondale police officer, brought trespassing charges against Russell, a senior majoring in management, after Russell drove his motorcycle through the private driveway of the Uptown Motel at 309 E. Main St., Carbondale.

Rossiter said that Russell drove past at least four trespassing signs, one of which was "8 feet by 12 feet big and floodlit." Rossiter was off duty at the time and working as assistant manager of the motel which is owned by his wife's family.

Russell said that he was riding through the passageway with the intention of stopping to inquire about the rates "when Rossiter jumped out from behind a potted plant and grabbed me off my motorcycle." Russell was arrested and posted a $25 bond.

The first court date, June 19, was set for the Carbondale court. Russell pleaded not guilty. On June 29, he requested a change of venue stating that he felt he could not get a fair trial in Carbondale with Judge Schwartz presiding. The request was granted and the case continued to July 10. Later, the date was changed to July 12 in Murphysboro with Judge Richman presiding.

After the trial started Russell made a motion charging Rossiter with assault, another motion requesting a trial by jury and a third motion requesting a court-appointed lawyer.

The motions were denied. Judge Richman said that he could not accept complaints unless it was an affirmative defense relevant to this case. He said that Russell should file complaints with the state's attorney's office of Jackson County.

In denying the other two motions, Richman said the request for jury trial "was not timely made" and that the city was not obligated to provide an attorney to Russell, but

"Schulhof is employed by the city of Carbondale to represent them in the violation of the city ordinances."

Schulhof made no opening statements but Russell made a motion for seclusion of witness. Request was granted.

Rossiter was called as the city's first witness and stated that three charges of trespassing had been brought against pedestrians by the motel in the past and each of them was prosecuted.

During cross-examination Russell requested that Rossiter read the Uptown Motel advertising on page 75 of the 1972 yellow pages in the General Telephone Directory.

Schulhof saw no objections. After Rossiter read the ad, Russell asked if the ad was true in stating that the motel was triple A. Rossiter said "at the time the ad was printed the ad was true."

After making a short opening statement, Russell took the stand and motioned that four pictures he had taken be admitted as evidence. Judge Richman reserved judgment but later ruled them admissible.

Richman said that the pictures were "not very good" and that he "did not believe they represented anything in terms of showing where, why or how they were taken."

Upon cross-examination Russell stated that he could not identify the pictures simply by looking at them, adding that "That's the way it is, you can't see the signs unless you read the fine print."

Following short closing statements, Judge Richman pointed out that the only question in this case is whether or not the defendant violated the trespassing ordinance. "The evidence indicates that he did and therefore," he said, "the defendant is guilty and will be fined $10 and court costs."

Jim Kerley, circuit court clerk, said that he was willing to assist Russell in filing a notice for appeal.

Russell has thirty days to do so and the appeal bond is $100.

"Unless I get some backing," Russell said, "I won't be appealing because I don't have the resources."

British security forces keep Protestant march peaceful

BELFAST (AP) — Thousands of Orangemen marched on Wednesday to commemorate the 17th Century battle that established Protestant power in Northern Ireland. A huge British security operation kept the marches from erupting into clashes with Roman Catholic militants.

But gunmen shot dead three youths, including a 15-year-old mentally handicapped boy, keeping sectarian tension much in evidence, raising the death toll in three years of sectarian strife to at least 420.

In downtown Londonderry, a 200-pound gelignite bomb blasted dozens of shops and offices. British troops defused another of equal size.

In Belfast, troops and guerrillas traded fire in a series of skirmishes. The Protestants ignored a persistent downpour to parade across the bloodstained province on the day marking the 282nd anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne where William III defeated the Catholic legions of James II in 1690.

They marched with thumping drums and piping flutes to mass rallies, and then gradually dispersed.

The British army, fearful that the parades would spark a violent confrontation between the two sides, sealed off the centers of Belfast, Londonderry and Portadown. Catholics hate the Orange demonstrations as a flaunting of Protestant ascendancy.

Troops in full combat armor and equipped with high velocity rifles manned the parade routes, but they were stationed inside cross streets to avoid provocation.

In Belfast, a six-mile-long procession of Orangemen—ranks swollen by contingents of Protestants from Scotland, Liverpool and Toronto—snaked through the city.

The march skirted Roman Catholic enclaves and their havens for gunmen of the outlawed Irish Republican Army without trouble.

The column included military-style vehicles manned by masked members of the extremist Ulster Defense Association.

They were clearly prepared to deal with possible Catholic or IRA attacks.

The tone of speeches at the rallies was clearly resentful of the British government's four months of direct rule in the North. Many militant Protestants claim they have been betrayed by British concessions to the Roman Catholic minority.

Marchers invade McGovern's hotel

By Howard Benedict

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—More than 300 young demonstrators, many of whom came here to boost the candidacy of George McGovern, barged into the lobby of the senator's hotel headquarters Wednesday to protest reports he might change his stand on some issues such as Vietnam and tax reform.

Another 200 marched outside, carrying Viet Cong flags and a banner that read "Remember LBJ Promised Peace, Too, in 1964 and He Didn't Deliver."

Helmeted police initially moved the demonstrators out of the lobby on the sidewalk, but many of them simply moved around and entered through other hotel entrances.

When demonstration leaders promised to be peaceful, the police withdrew to the sidelines.

Security was especially heavy at the Doral Beach Hotel following the arrest of two men carrying guns there earlier in the day.

The demonstrators said they wanted to tell the South Dakota senator personally that they didn't want him to abandon the issues that sold most of them on his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination, especially his strong antiwar stand.

But McGovern, who reportedly was in the building, did not appear.

At the same time, with McGovern's nomination practically assured, between 100 and 150 young people folded their tents and left Flamingo Park where more than 1,000 demonstrators have been camped. It has been the staging area for several peaceful marches on Convention Hall.

They vowed to come back in greater numbers for the Republican Convention in August to demonstrate against President Nixon.

And they didn't guarantee things would be so peaceful then.

"Our man George has the nomination and we're happy about that," said Yippie Manuel Lopez of Miami as he sat in front of his tent in Flamingo Park where the demonstrators are camped.

"But from what we hear, George is leaning more toward the right," he added. "We must put McGovern back on his stage. He must not slip off."

The young people—Zippies, Yippies, Students for a Democratic Society, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Vietnam Veterans against the War—were concerned primarily about a report that McGovern would back a plan to station a large number of troops in Thailand and on ships offshore after withdrawal from Vietnam.

Of 27 people polled on their choice for the Democratic vice-presidential nomination, 18 said they favored Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts.

"Like his brothers, John and Bobby, he works for the young people and the oppressed," said Dorothy Bring of the SDS from Chicago.

Throughout the week the protesters have been here, they have effectively policed themselves and have kept the park relatively clean.

Their hope is that their good behavior will influence the Miami Beach City Council to also allow them to use the park for the GOP Convention Aug. 21-23.

U-Senate plans meeting for constituency heads

A Monday meeting of University Senate constituency heads is being planned to elect a Screening Committee chairman and discuss the appointments of joint standing committee members.

Constituency heads are Joe Camille, graduate student council; Sue Collett, student body vice-president; David R. Derge, SIU president; Don Gladden, non-academic employees council chairman; Rex Karnes, administrative and professional staff council chairman; Thomas Pace, faculty council chairman; and John Zimmerman, graduate faculty council chairman. Members of the joint standing committees are now appointed by the U-Senate executive committee. A proposal calls for the members to be appointed by the constituency body heads of the area to which the respective committees report.

David Kenney, U-Senate president, has asked the members to attend the meeting which he termed "important." He said proxies should be sent if members cannot attend in person.

Business affairs assistant named temporary bursar

Thomas J. Watson, assistant in the service division of business affairs, has been named acting bursar after the resignation of former bursar Arthur Albon earlier this month. The announcement was made Wednesday by Danilo Orescanin, vice president for administration and campus treasurer. Watson said he does not know when a new bursar will be found due to SIU organizational changes at the administrative level.

Holy cow!

Caray brings Sox to life

By Joe Marshall
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP)—It's Wednesday afternoon at White Sox park and Harry Caray grabs his satchel and a cooler full of beer and heads for the bleachers.

He winds through the crowd saying "hello" and signing autographs. When he finally reaches the bleachers there's a loud roar "Holy Cow, it's Harry Caray," with the fans emphasizing the "Holy Cow," Caray's favorite phrase of astonishment.

In makeshift fashion, he sets up to broadcast the game from the bleachers as he does every Wednesday afternoon when the Sox are home. But first he does his pregame show which is devoted entirely to the fans.

They ask questions, they answer questions. Harry kisses the girls, hands out free passes and every now and then he spots an oldtimer and slips him a beer saying "Have a cold one on me."

The crowd cheers his every gesture. His boyish enthusiasm, before the packed crowd, is epidemic. They love him and let him know it. He loves the admiration and responds accordingly.

Harry Caray has done his part in bringing the fans back to the White Sox. The team has drawn well over a half million and will do a million or better this season after suffering a couple of agonizing years at the gate.

"It used to be," says ticket manager Tommy Maloney "that the fan wanted seats on the third base or first base lines. Now, the tickets that go first are in the upper deck in front of Caray's broadcasting booth."

Caray took the White Sox job under the most trying conditions before the start of the 1971 season. The club was probably the worst in baseball and didn't have a single Chicago station carrying the games. He was, and still is, announcing through small suburban stations but on a recent road trip to the West Coast, Caray's ratings were so astounding that they far outdid several major Chicago stations combined.

"I couldn't get to them," says Caray. "My job was to generate enough interest and excitement so they would try to find me."

Caray suffered emotional heart-break three years ago when he was fired after 25 years of announcing games for the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I can't say it was a shock," recalls Caray "because there had been rumors. What really hurt is that nobody called me in to talk to me about it. That's the least I could expect after 25 years."

"To this day Gussie Busch Cardinal owner can't look me straight in the eye."

"Financially, it's a different story and I finally learned what a stupid businessman I had been. I never negotiated any contracts. I was so in love with the Cardinals that whatever they wanted I did."

"I made more money the one year I was with Oakland than I ever did with the Cardinals. Charlie Finley was great to me but Oakland was too far from home St. Louis. Now I'm making even more money with the Sox."

"I always thought I would die at the mike doing Cardinal baseball games," continued Caray. "I had had three different offers through the years to go to New York. But I always said if I had to consider working anywhere else it would be Chicago. I never dreamed the day would come I would really have to consider Chicago."

"I love it here. I relate to the people and have great rapport. I leave the park after a game and stop at a bar and talk baseball and sports with the fans. Between doubleheaders I'd like to have a sandwich and a beer, but I've already promised the fans to sign autographs and I do."

"An announcer is the eyes and ears of the people and if he can't communicate, he's in trouble. An announcer should be himself and his enthusiasm must be genuine. You can't fake it and screaming is not the answer."

Carey has run into a little trouble over his criticism of players and the club when things are not going right for the White Sox.

"I hate to be brutally frank but it's my responsibility to inform the fan even if it is at the expense of hurting a player. If I don't tell the truth, the listener will become suspicious. Not only will he stop believing me but, consequently, he won't buy your product. If he trusts you, he'll buy the product you're selling."

"I've had players complain to me and I've told them to write it out on paper and if they can make themselves sound good after striking out and making errors, I'll put it on the air. And you know what? They agree with me."

"After all, baseball is not life or death. It's a game and, like I say, you can't beat fun at the ol' ball park. Also, an announcer has to be a reporter, a showman and an entertainer. You're on the air for three or four hours and you can't just give them balls and strikes. You have to entertain."

There is one thing Harry Caray cannot be accused of and that is he's not entertaining.

Fischer drops opening game

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP)—World champion Boris Spassky won the first game Wednesday in his world title chess series against American Bobby Fischer.

Fischer, in a hopeless position, resigned. He stood up, folded his score sheet and walked out of the Reykjavik sports palace.

The decision confirmed the judgment of the experts who considered Fischer was in a difficult position when the game was adjourned after 40 moves Tuesday night.

The victory gave Spassky a 1-0 lead in the 24-game match and an important psychological advantage. Fischer never has beaten Spassky. His winless streak against the Russian now stands at six games.

Fischer's resignation came after he had staged a walkout, apparently in objection to movie cameras in the back of the hall. He stormed off-stage and did not return for 30 minutes.

Then, a while later, Fischer indicated he had given up by reaching over and stopping the clock.

He shook hands with Spassky and, before he left, turned and waved to the crowd. The spectators applauded Spassky.

At the side of Fischer's car outside the stage door was a friend since childhood, John Collins, a wheel chair-ridden paraplegic who taught Fischer the moves when he was a kid in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Fischer rolled down the window and said, "I'm sorry for what happened. It will settle down."

Then he drove away to the air-conditioned seclusion of his $63-a-day hotel suite.
